Tapescript 9.1

Hi, Susan, hope you are doing well. I left very early in the morning while you were sleeping. You know, I have to sit for two midterm exams today, and I'll be at school all day. I did some of the work in our new apartment yesterday, but we have a lot more to do before we move in. I dusted the furniture and had the floor mopped. For today, I need some favor. Can you please call the cleaner and have the windows cleaned? If she has time, help her clean the bathrooms, too. She told me that she would be short of time this week. And, the Internet ... I called the service provider yesterday, but they had no time. Can you call them and try to convince them for an earlier installation? We need to get the Internet installed as early as possible. Also, the painter will be there at around 3 p.m. Can you please show him the walls that need painting? I know that's too much, honey, but we have to go together. Thanks, bye.

Tapescript 9.1 Workbook

Nancy : Mom! Have you noticed the trouble?

Mom : The trouble? What do you mean?

Nancy : My computer is crashed. I need to get it formatted.

David : Come on, Nancy! I can format it for you. It is a piece of cake. But the burning question is what I will do with my cracked smartphone. I have just dropped it. The screen is cracked. Look at this. What am I going to do now?

Dad : Oh, my! New ones are very expensive, so, you should get it fixed by a professional.

David : It seems there is no way out. I'll have to do that.

Mom : Oh, guess what? This new vacuum cleaner is not working.

David : You are joking! Is this a nightmare or what? It's brand new. Have you had the warranty approved, Mom?

Mom : Yeah, fortunately. But I have no time to deal with such work. So, I will get your dad to take it back to the store and return it. Anyway, I must go and get my hair styled for my friend's wedding. That's not all. I will have the tailor fix my dress...
